

Male Facelift FAQ's

Q : Do men have facelifts?

A: It is becoming more popular for men to have facial surgery. If you have a low brow position and excess skin on your eyelids these procedures can be done at the same time you have a facelift.

Q: Does a facelift hurt?

A: Most men say that a facelift is uncomfortable with some degree of tightness.

Q: How old is too old for a facelift?

A: Most men are in their forties to sixties, but facelifts can be done successfully on people in their seventies or eighties, as long as you are fit and healthy.

Q; What complications are associated with a facelift?

Complications that can occur include haematoma (a collection of blood under the skin that must be removed by the surgeon), injury to the nerves that control facial muscles (this is temporary in 1 in 150 cases and permanent in less than 1 in 1000 facelifts, according to the plastic surgical literature), infection, and reactions to the anaesthesia. Poor healing of the skin (and even death of part of it) is most likely to affect smokers. Numbness of one ear occurs in about 1 in 100 facelifts.

Q: What will my recovery time be after a facelift?

Facelift recovery times are longer than other procedures. You should be up and about in a day or two, but plan on taking it easy for the first week after surgery. Be especially gentle with your face and hair, since your skin will be both tender and numb, and may not respond normally at first.
